

Talisman Energy:

Out of Colombia!

Silence makes us accomplices:
let's target the Canadian war
profiteers in Colombia

Sir,

Colombia's dirty war is responsible for massacres, population displacements, assassinations and the imprisonment of dissidents. This local conflict is not unfamiliar to Canada since you run Talisman Energy, a Canadian oil and gas company operating on Colombia's territory.

You are a war profiteer because:

- You bought, in 2010, British Petroleum, a company that had to pay millions of US dollars to Colombian communities in 2009 as compensation in order to avoid a trial. The company was accused of having benefited from the reign of terror led by paramilitary units, who protected the 730 kilometere long OCENSA pipeline.

- This pipeline, now a property of Enbridge, is used to carry your oil and is lined with 17 military bases protected by 1400 soldiers. Enbridge is also on Canadian territory: its runs the 1177 kilometere long Northern Gateway pipeline megaproject in British Columbia, aimed to carry bitumine from the Alberta tar sands to a shallow-water port on the Pacific coast. The Northern Gateway pipeline is moreover highly contested by First Nations communities living in the area, who would be directly affected by the construction.

- You are not only a war profiteer in Colombia, you also are well established in the province of Quebec, exploiting the controversial shale gas.
